How I Use Cookies

A cookie is a small file placed on your computer's hard drive that helps analyse web traffic or allows web applications to respond to you as an individual. The web application can tailor its operations to your needs, likes, and dislikes by gathering and remembering information about your preferences.

I use traffic log cookies to identify which pages are being used. This helps me analyse data about webpage traffic and improve the website to better tailor it to your needs. This information is only used for statistical analysis purposes, and the data is removed from the system afterward.

Overall, cookies help me provide a better website experience by enabling me to monitor which pages are useful and which are not. A cookie does not give me access to your computer or any other information about you, other than the data you choose to share with me.

You can choose to accept or decline cookies. Most web browsers automatically accept cookies, but you can usually modify your browser settings to decline them if you prefer. However, this may prevent you from fully enjoying the website.

I do not control the delivery of cookies from third-party service providers such as Google Analytics or YouTube. Any concerns or questions regarding these cookies should be directed to the respective service provider.

By continuing to use this website, you are consenting to the placement of cookies on your device. If you do not agree, please disable cookies in your browser settings. For technical support, please contact your IT support provider.

To delete cookies or manage your settings, follow your browser's instructions to "delete your cache."

To prevent cookies from being placed on your system by this website, adjust your browser settings to disallow cookies. If you continue to use the website without changing your settings, I assume you are happy to accept all cookies from my site.
